Second of Three - Phase Hopyard/I580 Project Gets Underway

The second stage of construction at the Hopyard-Dougherty road interchange with Interstate 580 is now underway.

The second stage, stage IB, will include all the remaining improvements needed at the interchange except for the construction of an additional overpass which will span I-580, according to the City.

Stage 1A, which included the construction of retaining walls, grading and drainage improvements, was completed in April. The construction of the new bridge, which will run parallel to the existing Hopyard Road overpass, will begin sometime this coming winter.

This construction, along with the construction of an additional lane in each direction of I-580 between I-680 and Hopyard, represents the project's final phase.

At its scheduled completion in September, 1987, the Hopyard-Dougherty/I-580 interchange will feature a three-lane bridge for motorists headed toward Dublin or westbound I-580, and a separate two-lane bridge for those headed toward Pleasanton or eastbound I-580.

Exit ramps from I-580 will flare to four lanes each as they meet with the Hopyard-Dougherty bridges. Newly installed, computer-synchronized traffic signals will then direct motorists north into Dublin or south into Pleasanton.

The $13 million project is being financed by the North Pleasanton Improvement District, with monies collected from commercial developments in north Pleasanton. It is the first such major freeway project in Northern California to be planned, designed and entirely funded by the private sector.

I-580 Project Construction Schedule
Stage 1A	June, 1985-April, 1986 Work included improvements to drainage, construction of retaining walls; grading.
Stage 1B	June, 1986-May, 1987 Work includes new on- and off-ramps; additional lane on Hopyard for left turns onto Owens Drive; installation of traffic signals at exit ramps from eastbound and westbound I-580; placement and compaction of bridge foundation materials.
Stage 2	January, 1987-September, 1987 Construction of three-lane northbound overpass; re-striping of existing two-lane overpass to be used for southbound traffic; construction of additional lane in each direction of I-580 and Hopyard.

FYI is a bi-monthly column featuring guest writers. This column is by Gail Gilpin, Transportation Manager for the City of Pleasanton.

Traffic congestion is the commuter's nemesis. It wastes our time and can cause us to be tardy, stressed, tired and frustrated; not the ideal way to begin or end a productive day. In fact, traffic congestion can have a great impact on many areas of our lives including air quality, noise levels and energy resources.

Fortunately, Pleasanton does not have a serious traffic problem. In order to prevent one from developing while accommodating growth and maintaining the fine quality of life in Pleasanton, the City Council adopted the Transportation Systems Management ordinance (TSM) in October, 1984. It calls for employers, business complexes and the City to work together to reduce vehicle trips during peak commute hours.

The Pleasanton TSM ordinance is the first comprehensive law of its kind in the United States. One of its unique characteristics is that it applies to all employers in Pleasanton, not just to new development. But, the level of involvement required by the ordinance is dependent upon the size and/or location of the employer.

"Pleasanton does not have a serious traffic problem."

All employers must respond to an annual transportation survey. It is the monitoring and planning tool which provides the employer and the city with information about travel patterns, habits and attitudes.

Medium sized employers are required to implement an information program. The purpose of which is to inform employees of their commute options and opportunities, such as, public transit, carpooling, vanpooling, walking or bicycling.

"The Pleasanton TSM Ordinance is the first comprehensive law of its kind in the United States."

The major work required by the ordinance falls to the large employers and business complexes. They are charged with developing and implementing TSM programs designed to reduce the number of peak hour vehicle trips by 45% over four years.

It is particularly unique that the large employers and complexes are allowed to develop their own TSM programs. This autonomy allows them to meet their employees' needs rather than having specific programs mandated by the city. It has resulted in effective employee TSM programs.

"...the large employers and complexes are allowed to develop their own TSM program."

For example, AT&T has established an ambitious ridesharing program. They have provided over 220 preferential parking spaces for employees who carpool or vanpool. As a result, more than 670 AT&T employees are ridesharing rather than driving alone to work.

Part of Clorox Technical Center's program focuses on employees who like to bicycle. They have organized a Bicycle

"Clorox has installed bicycle racks and lockers for employees'..."

Task Force which promotes bicycling to work. Clorox has installed bicycle racks and lockers for employees' convenience and security. And, as part of their marketing program, a special logo for TSM has been developed.

Safeco Insurance has purchased a van in which 12 employees commute to work from Tracy. They also personally help employees form carpools.

Hacienda Business Park has a variety of ongoing and special transportation programs designed to meet the TSM goals. Their parkwide program includes the Hacienda Shuttle which links with the Bay Fair BART station. They also have a ridesharing program and provide preferential and bicycle parking.

Alternative work hours have been used by several employers to reduce peak hour traffic. EG&G employees work four ten-hour days per week. Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical has shifted its work hours to miss peak traffic times. And, Pacific Bell has scheduled staggered work shifts for their employees on Johnson Drive.

"The commitment to TSM that has been demonstrated is the backbone of success in controlling traffic."

There are many varied programs for all the large employers and complexes in Pleasanton. These give an indication of all that has been done in the 18 months since the ordinance took effect. The commitment to TSM that has been demonstrated is the backbone of success in controlling traffic.

You, too, can become a part of TSM. Choose a new way of getting to work. If you live within five miles of work, try walking or bicycling. These are great stress relievers and fine forms of exercise, too. If you commute over five miles, consider transit. The new Livermore/Amador Valley Transit Authority will begin operating buses in Pleasanton and Dublin in July. The BART Express buses are available now. If you travel over ten miles to work, carpooling or vanpooling may fit your needs. RIDES for Bay Area Commuters can help you find people with whom to rideshare. The RIDES phone number is 861-POOL.

It isn't necessary to make a full-time commitment. Just give it a try and you too may become part of the solution to the problem of traffic congestion.

ON THE STREET

What's the most valuable thing your father has taught you?

(Little League baseball players on a Saturday at the Sports Park.)

Rob Sanchez, 13

"He's taught me about not being mean to older people, how to ride a bike and to get good grades. If I don't get good grades, I won't get into college...or get a car."

Robert Early, 12

"He's taught me how to live life. How to get along with people and not to be cocky."

Dave Sanchas, 14

"How to get along with other people who were my enemies by just ignoring them."

Paco Garcia, 13

"To get good grades in school. If you don't get good grades, you'll never get into the pros or anything at all in life. I'm working very hard to do that."

Andy Slattery, 13

"Not to answer back, and to do what my mom tells me; and to be nice to all my friends."

Darrell Sargent, 13

"He taught me to believe in myself and to use my best judgment. I shouldn't always believe other people and shouldn't believe everything I hear."

Notes from Lilly's Pad

"It's nifty to be 50", so said the signs strategically placed around the home of the birthday gentleman.

It is amazing what good friends can do to a perfectly happy person when they learn the secret of the "big O" birthdays.

This particular attorney knew his family would be pulling off some sort of celebration, but he just didn't know the where, what and when. The suspense kept him on his toes.

Why he didn't get a clue of the plans is amazing when there were so many people behind the scenes plotting and scheming.

Then it had finally happened. On a Sunday afternoon as the "turning 50" individual sat quietly with his neighbors on the front lawn, a sudden burst of noise approached the scene.

A parade honoring this gentleman came down the street. A parade unlike any other parade - it stopped traffic for two blocks.

When a policeman arrived on the scene, the group became a little nervous because they suddenly realized no one got permission from the City to put on this parade.

However, they felt confident that if they landed in jail they knew a good attorney who would represent them. Or would he???

Cops are not as bad as people want to make them. This policeman watched the party-goers head for their destination, tooted his horn and yelled a "Happy Birthday" greeting.

Maybe he knew that under one of those costumes was a judge!

It has often been said, "clothes make the person." This is certainly true when a body becomes encased in a costume.

Amazing how you can look at someone in a costume and not recognize them until they speak.

This "clowning" group were experts in the selection of a costume.

The highlight of the afternoon, however, had to be the four singing/dancing ladies.

They sang to the tune of "In Your Easter Bonnet," with words written by a very talented young (??) lady.

The words were cleverly written to capture important segments of the gentlemen's life.

The revealing afternoon was put on tape so the esquire can enjoy watching his special day for the next 50 years.

Many more happy birthdays.

"Kan Do" it was great fun.

Still Running a Mama and Papa Business on Main Street

by Jana Pantazelos

For Corinne Mavridis, the bakery is home. Not a second home, but home.

The Pleasanton Bakery has been located on Main Street in the heart of downtown Pleasanton for 20 years. Corinne and Ted Mavridis have been an ongoing part of Main Street commercial life for longer than any other merchants. Ted has been a Pleasanton resident for 27 years and Corinne for 25.

They arrived when Pleasanton was a country burg of 3500 people. The bakery site was the town's post office and the Mavridis' bought it from the original owners. There are still bars on the back windows from those early days.

Corinne first came to town on a visit with her mother in 1961. The family was living in Portland, Oregon and her father had just died. Family friends urged her mother to get away for a while and Corinne accompanied her mother on the trip.

Though a small, outlying town, Pleasanton has always had a sizeable Greek community. On this first trip, Corinne met husband-to-be Ted Mavridis. Ted's third cousin, known affectionately as uncle, was Jim Voultzides, owner of the Cheese Factory on Main Street. They were introduced, and the rest, as they say, is history.

Corinne Mavridis, at home in her bakery on Main Street.

They bought the bakery in 1966 and over the last 20 years, the bakery has been the gathering place for many friends and regular customers. The doors open at 7:30 a.m. and there are always customers waiting at the door.

Corinne thinks of herself as the social director and Ted the baker in the business. She is gregarious and out-going and makes people feel welcome. And she is not shy about her age. She tells you up front that she's 52; and in case you missed it, her personalized automobile license plate spells out her birthday, "1 May 34."

In addition to helping with the family business, Corinne has been enthusiastically involved in many civic organizations over the years. She started out as a Pink Lady at Valley Memorial Hospital and was a member of the original Pleasanton Women's Club. She has been a member of the Chamber of Commerce and its Board of Directors; President of the local Soroptimists and is serving as a delegate to their national convention in Seattle this year.

She was involved with Pleasanton American Little League for ten years and served on its decision-making board and she is a charter member of Pleasanton's Sister City organization and just returned from a trip to Tulancingo. "I was truly comfortable there, it felt like going home."

All of these involvements helped her get to know people from all over the Valley, "I cherish all the people I've met through the years."

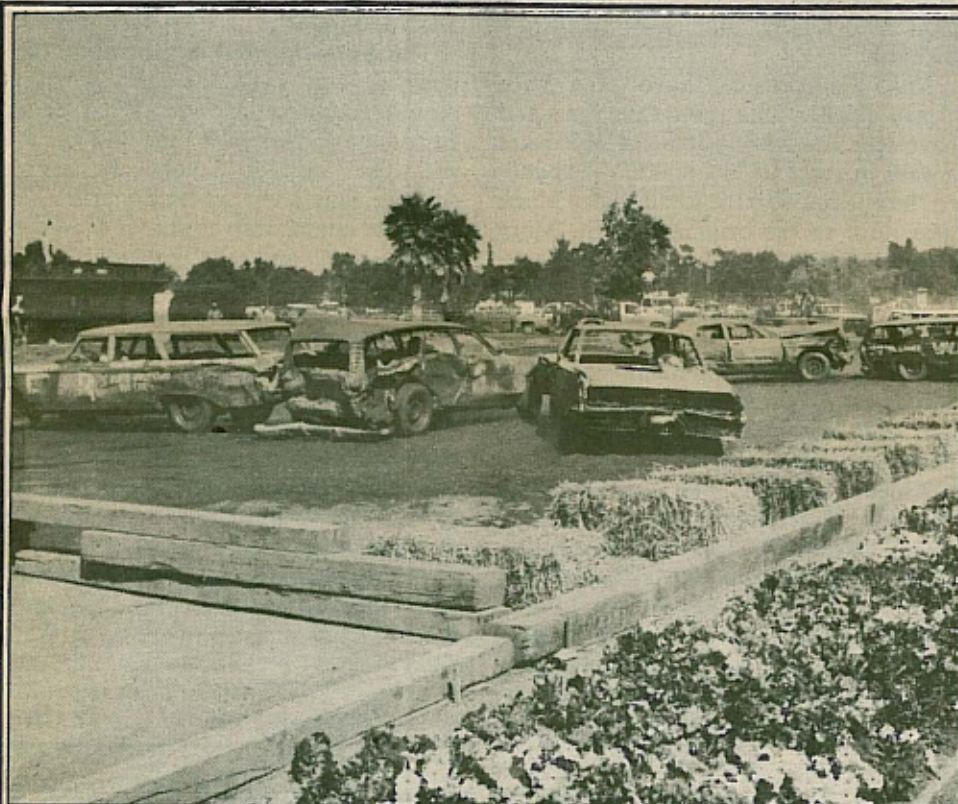

Many of her regular customers have been coming to the bakery for almost as long as it's been on Main St. Corinne has seen children grow up and friends grow old.

Young people are a fixture at the bakery since the Mavridis' have always hired part-time workers from the local high school. Her own children, Melodee, 23, and John, 18, grew up with the bakery.

Melodee is now a fashion merchandiser for Nordstrom's in Walnut Creek, but still plans to stick close to home. As soon as remodeling work is completed, she will live in the Victorian house behind her parent's bakery.

John just graduated from Amador High this year and will head off to junior college in the fall. Though John has spent a lot of time in the bakery, Corinne doubts if he will take over the family business. "Baking is a hard life, it takes an old country man to do it," she says.

In the '70's, Ted and Corinne bought most of the block where their bakery sits. "Pleasanton has been so good to us. Now I feel like I own the heart of downtown Pleasanton."

The 10th annual Destruction Derby will feature the best of beat up wrecks on Sunday, June 22. Trophies and $1300 in prizes will be awarded to the first, second and third place winners in each heat. Admission to the Derby is $4 plus fair admission for adults and $2 plus fair admission for children.

My President, Right or Wrong...

Americans are schizophrenic about their chief executives. They either love 'em or hate 'em. Usually the love affair begins several decades after the president has died or left office. We never seem to appreciate them while they're around.

Of course there have been several notable exceptions. Eisenhower was beloved before and during his presidential terms, but historians rank him as just OK.

Nixon was pilloried by both the press and public but twelve years after his resignation, seems to be garnering a degree of respectability again.

Reagan is dubbed "the great communicator" by friends and foes alike; but who knows how history will regard him?

Here are some interesting tidbits of information about presidents who aren't around anymore to defend themselves.

William Howard Taft was the fattest weighing in at 280 pounds.

Abraham Lincoln was the tallest at six feet, four inches.

William Henry Harrison served the shortest term, one month.

Andrew Jackson was the only president to fight a duel.

Calvin Coolidge smoked too many cigars.

Abraham Lincoln never used tobacco in any form.

James Monroe was the last president to wear knee breeches.

Andrew Jackson was the first president to ride in a train.

William McKinley was the first president to ride in a car.

John F. Kennedy was the youngest president elected.

Thomas Jefferson was 35 years old when he drafted the Declaration of Independence. He had a personal library containing over 10,000 books; which proves once again what JFK said about him: the White House dining room never contained so great an assemblage of intellect as when Jefferson dined alone.

"Cake-ology" A Family Affair for Laudenschs

When the original owners of Noland's Cakes decided to sell the business, Laura Laudensch convinced her parents it was a terrific opportunity. Laura had been working at Noland's for a number of years and talked her parents, Aldean and Don Laudensch, into becoming the new owners.

The Laudenschs have now been "cake-ologists" for about four years and have seen the weekly total of 200 cakes a week increase to 300, and have expanded the operation to the small stucco house next door to the original 327 St. Mary Street location.

Don does the paper work, bookkeeping, gardening and maintenance in addition to his regular full-time job. The boys, Mike and Dave, help out with maintenance and deliveries. Laura manages the operation and even nine-year-old granddaughter, Harmony, helps out.

Aldean says 75% of their wedding business is actually from outside the valley. Customers come from as far away as San Francisco, San Mateo and San Jose.

One of their most unusual special orders was for a 3'x6' sheet cake to serve 1000 at a business anniversary celebration. They had to install a special platform in their delivery van to accommodate the cake.

Another unusual order was for a cake which was quick frozen, carried on a trans-Pacific jet flight, and thawed out just in time for a family reunion in Tokyo, Japan.

The Laudenschs say most of their business comes to them by word-of-mouth recommendations. What brings customers to Noland's time and again is the wide range of flavors, the custom designs that their in-house artist can create or adapt from customer drawings, and the quick and reliable service. Cakes are baked on order and only two days notice is required. Even last minute service is possible if the customer calls the order in by noon for a late afternoon pick up.

Laura tells about customers who come back for wedding cakes for second and even third marriages. She says she actually had one woman ask for a "second-time-around discount."

The staff and management at Noland's enjoy their work and there is a real family feeling that extends to all the workers. They hope to continue making their customers' special events even more special for many years to come.

What's Cooking ?

As the weather turns warm, preparing full meals in a hot kitchen is not the cozy chore we enjoyed on cool winter evenings. Pre-heating the oven and par-boiling the rice are tasks best left for the crisp days of autumn.

At this time of year, produce sections in supermarkets are full of the tasty bounty of California's agricultural heartland as well as exotic fruits and vegetables from all over the world. So, the best answer to the hot weather meal dilemma is... salads.

Remember, there's more to enjoy in salads than iceberg lettuce and tomatoes. Bibb, Red Leaf, Romaine and Butter lettuce as well as spinach leaves, escarole and endive all offer variety to salad bowls and are richer in vitamins A and C.

Vegetables we're all used to eating steamed with butter or lemon are crunchy and delicious raw. They add texture, color and nutrition to a tossed salad. Try raw cauliflower, broccoli, zucchini and green beans.

Give your salads an international touch by adding: pea pods and water chestnuts for a suggestion of the Orient; black olives and Feta cheese for a touch of Greece; and garbanzo beans and parmesan cheese for a bit of Italy.

If a salad hardly seems enough for a main course, even on a hot summer night, try these salad entrees. Add a loaf of crusty bread from your favorite bakery and a cool beverage and dessert; and you'll be well satisfied.

PASTA SALAD VINAIGRETTE

1 10 oz. pkg. spinach rotelle pasta
1 head of cauliflower broken into bite size florets
10-15 cherry tomatoes, halved
1 red bell pepper, sliced
1/2 purple onion, thinly sliced

VINAIGRETTE DRESSING

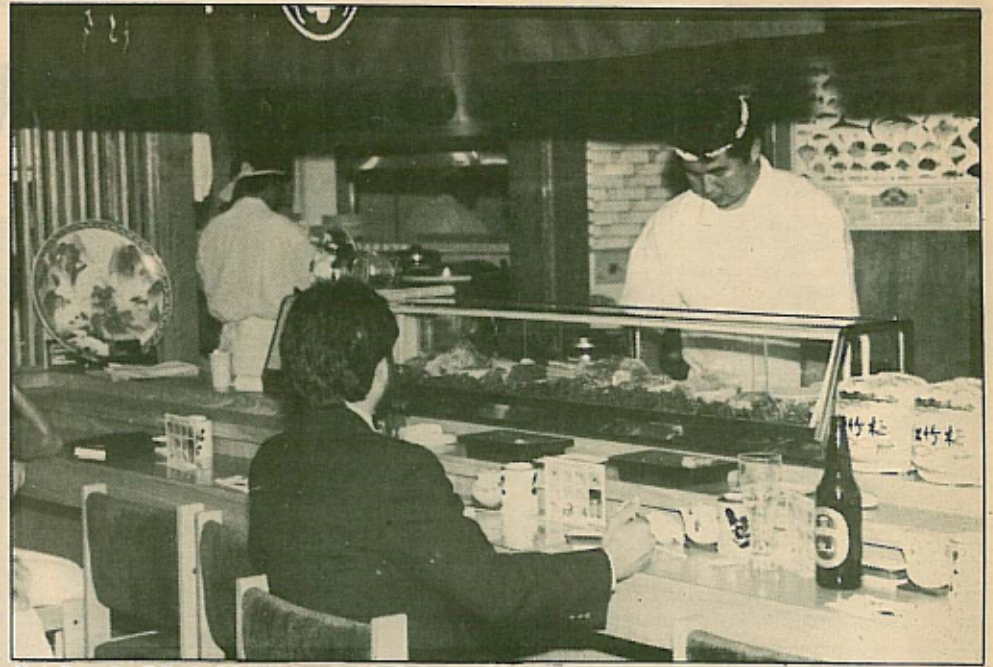

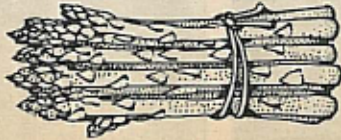

3/4 c. olive oil
1/4 c. wine vinegar
2 tsp. leaf oregano
1 tsp. thyme
1 tsp. dill weed
1 tsp. sugar
garlic salt and pepper to taste

Boil pasta according to package directions; rinse under cold water until cool. Add cauliflower, tomatoes, bell pepper and onions. Pour dressing over all ingredients and mix well. Refrigerate for several hours. Serves 4-6.

LOW-CALORIE LEMON CAPER CRAB SALAD

12 oz. crab meat
1/2 c. lite mayonnaise
12-16 fresh asparagus spears, steam cooked and cooled
1 T. lemon juice
1 T. drained capers
1/2 t. prepared mustard
1/2 t. Worcestershire sauce

Place asparagus spears on each of four lettuce lined plates and crab meat over asparagus. Blend together remaining ingredients. Spoon 1 tablespoon mayonnaise dressing over crab. Garnish with quartered hard-boiled eggs. Serves 4.

Sato's colorful chef in action behind the sushi bar.

Let's Eat Out!

Sato, the Japanese restaurant in Hopyard Village, is probably the most exotic place to eat in Pleasanton. The small corner restaurant seats five at its sushi bar and several dozen more at simple black tables separated by split bamboo screens. Shoji-style screens cover the windows, and the lovely waitresses are dressed in traditional kimonos with colorful obi sashes.

Japanese cuisine is more than raw fish, although there is plenty of that. Reluctant diners are encouraged by the energetic waitress, "you have to try it sometime."

Nigiri is the popular sūshi sampler which includes sushi rolls of boiled rice with raw tuna, halibut, squid, octopus, eel or shrimp. The sushi rolls are individually prepared and arranged in two perfect rows on a red lacquer tray. The appearance and color of Japanese dishes is almost as important as the taste. The sushi rolls are dipped in wasabi, a sauce made with hot green mustard and soy sauce. Be careful, it's hot!

Fish and vegetable tempura is another favorite. Fresh fish and large pieces of broccoli, carrot, sweet potato and whole mushrooms are dipped in the light tempura batter and fried quickly in peanut oil. They emerge crisp and very light in color. They are dipped in a salty, broth.

The lunch box specials offer a tasty way to get a sampling of the best of Sato. The waitress brings a large, flat wooden box divided into six sections. Again the arrangement and color are pleasing. The sushi lunch box contains generous portions of chicken teriyaki, tempura vegetables and shrimp, small seaweed wrapped sushi rolls and various garnishes.

Sato is a one-of-a-kind in Pleasanton. It's busy most evenings and does a brisk lunchtime business. If you don't arrive by 11:45 a.m., be prepared to wait. Single diners are comfortable at the sushi bar and get a close-up view of the culinary acrobatics of the chef who calls out as each order is ready.

Prices are moderate; dinner reservations are taken for large parties only.

Clorox Grant to Buenas Vidas Ranch

The Buenas Vidas Ranch foster care facility in Livermore will soon be providing shelter to twice the number of troubled young people, thanks to a grant from the Clorox Foundation.

Clorox will contribute $10,000 toward the cost of constructing an additional bedroom and bath at Reinicker House, which is one of two foster care homes located on the 33-acre ranch. The new facilities will enable the ranch to house three additional foster parents and six more teenagers, double the present number.

A team of employees from the Clorox Technical Center in Pleasanton recommended the $10,000 grant to the Clorox Foundation. Each year, in addition to its other activities, the foundation contributes special grants up to $10,000 to youth-oriented projects in communities where Clorox operates. This is its seventh such grant this year.

The Clorox employee team considered 11 projects in all, before electing to support Buenas Vidas. "After reviewing all the projects, it became clear to us that Buenas Vidas was meeting a critical need in our community and was most deserving of our support," said team leader, Joyce Turner.

Other team members included Virgil Gass of Pleasanton, George Ogar of Dublin, and Bob Tucker of Livermore.

Buenas Vidas Ranch is a non-profit corporation founded in 1974 to provide foster care to teenagers in Pleasanton, Dublin, Livermore and Southern Alameda County. In cooperation with various local counseling services, it also provides housing to other troubled youth in the county.

"With the additional rooms, we finally will have the facilities we need to expand our services and make our program a truly viable part of the Livermore Valley," said Sally Bystroff, administrator of Buenas Vidas Ranch. "We're very excited."

'Friendly Visitors'

Senior Support Program Volunteers Honored

The Senior Support Program was established four years ago to provide "Friendly Visitors" to the frail, isolated elderly in the Tri-Valley area. The program's goal is to prevent this populations premature move to nursing homes by preventing some of the factors that often lead to such a move. These include isolation, loneliness and a lack of fundamental services.

On Thursday evening, June 5, volunteers who act as "Friendly Visitors" were recognized for their contributions to the Senior Support Program. These volunteers work in partnership with program staff to help break the elder's isolation and monitor their needs.

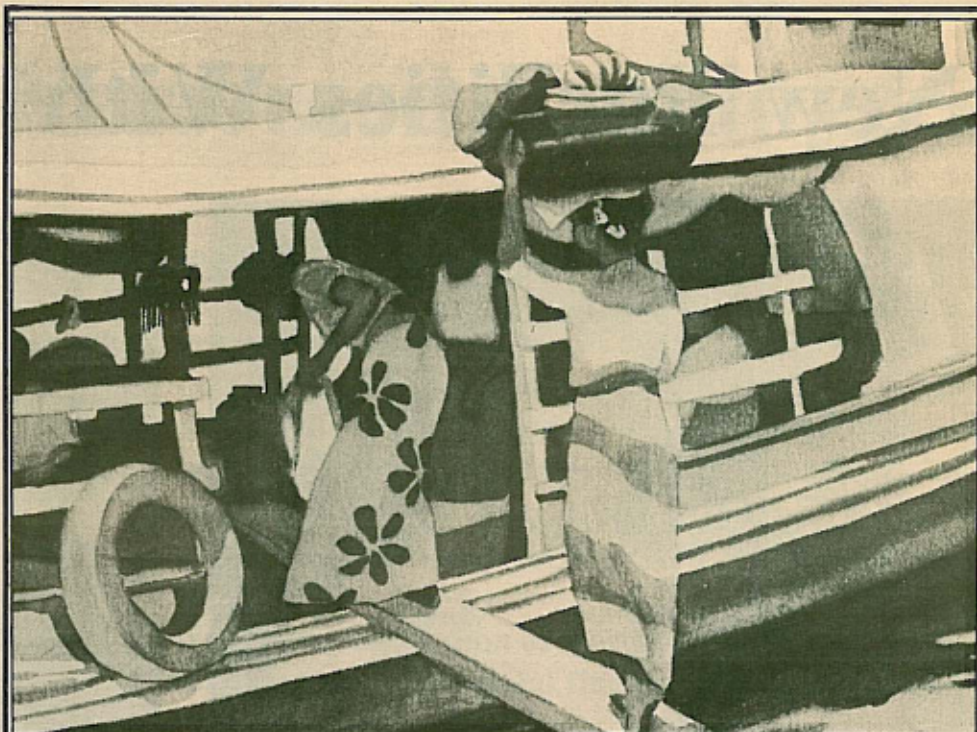

The annual recognition evening was held in the Recreation Room at Pleasanton Gardens. Eight volunteers who have worked with the program since its inception four years ago were honored. They are: Anna Andreason, Pat Curran, Mary Dillon, Agnes Moen, Bruce Borton, Eva Thornton, Linda Cupp and Vivian Thorson.

The following volunteers were recognized for their three years of generous service: Verla Babbitt, Mary Kent, Helen Bailey, Grace Shorter, Diane Butler, Glendyn Snider, Jan Heath, Paula Spitzer, Dennis Jorgenson and Joan O'Laughlin.

Additionally several community organizations have been instrumental in contributing to the important work of this program. They include the Pleasanton Women's Club, the Pleasanton Junior Women's Club, the St. Augustine's Women's Club, St. Clare's Episcopal Church and Jewish Family Services of the Greater East Bay.

The Senior Support Program office is located at 4361 Railroad Avenue. For further information, phone 462-7643.

Valley Human Services Network to be Linked by Computer

CIRACS, Inc. is a non-profit organization recently awarded a $2000 Tri-Valley Community Fund grant to facilitate the development of a computerized network of human services.

Soon, a mix of local agencies, public entities and corporate personnel departments in two counties will be linked by microcomputers so they can share up-to-date information and resources.

In 1982 private and community leaders joined together to form the Valleys Corridor Project. They came together in recognition of the strain placed on the human care services infrastructure by rapid population growth in the valley. CIRACS is the direct outgrowth of this community-wide volunteer effort to provide for information and communications exchange.

Dublin Mayor Peter Snyder is President of the CIRACS Board. "We saw a real need for a computerized system which would provide better access to human services and promote greater service coordination and resources management, and we wanted to create opportunities for local public officials, corporate leaders and agency managers to come together to make informed decisions about their communities."

The first phase of the project will see the establishment of a pilot network of Pleasanton, Dublin and San Ramon agencies working in the areas of substance abuse and related mental health areas.

Already signed up as network participants are twelve organizations including two counseling centers, an alcohol treatment center and a community center.

A community profile of each of the three cities in the pilot program will also be conducted to identify high risk populations and determine how well current resources match community needs. Community forums will be held to present the findings.

The goal of CIRACS is to be able to link human service organizations throughout the greater Bay Area.

CIRACS is located in Pleasanton at 5674 Stoneridge Dr., suite 108. For further information, phone 463-2182.

R.O.P. Honored 18 Graduates

The 14th annual graduation ceremony for ROP nursing assistants, held on June 10, honored 18 students.

Karen Logsdon, R.N. and vice-president for patient care services at Valley Memorial Hospital was the guest speaker and Manila McGuire who pioneered the program in 1971 presented diplomas to the graduates.

Graduating students from Pleasanton were: Kim Adamson, Denise Cristiano, Kelly Foster, Stefanie Kaufman, Missy Sandahl and Keliane Washburn.

According to McGuire, "the first objective of the Nursing Assistant Program is to give students a marketable skill so they can earn a living while pursuing their education, and the second is to expose them to the various careers in the health care field."

The 1985-86 school year marked the first time that the ROP Nursing Assistant Program was also open to adults from the community. A class for adults will continue to be offered on a one-semester basis.

There is no fee and books are provided. Students furnish uniforms, shoes and a watch with a second hand.

Registration information may be obtained by calling the ROP office at 455-9416.

Foothill High

Golfers Win C.I.F. Northern California Championship

The Foothill High School Golf team, with Coach Dan Chiolis at the helm, rolled to their second consecutive Northern California Championship recently on the Castlewood Country Club course.

In winning the event, Foothill had five players card scores of 79 or better for a team total of 385. This was good for a three stroke win over runner-up Merced. The Falcon contingent has played very consistently all season long, and playing for the championship on their home course certainly helped.

Merced's top two golfers shocked Foothill by shooting a 72 and a 73, while the Falcons' top duo, Bryan Pemberton and Scott Wardrope, had an uncharacteristic 78 and 77 respectively. The net effect of these scores left Foothill on the wrong side of a 10 stroke disadvantage, with real pressure being placed on Chiolis' other golfers to score well.

Aggressive sophomore Todd Fisher stepped forward to answer the call, and became the architect of Foothill's comeback win. Fisher, who has aspirations of playing collegiately for the U.C.L.A. Bruins, fired a sparkling five-over round of 75 to lead Foothill's "charge". The smooth swinging Falcon, whose steady golf game bears no resemblance to the driving technique he utilizes when "cruising" Foothill Road in his sports car, whipped Merced's number 4 and 5 players with his round and re-established Foothill's momentum.

Alex Rose, playing under the same pressure laden conditions, followed Fisher with a fine 77 to support the comeback effort. And another of Chiolis' youngsters, freshman Brad Kurtz, put the final touch on Foothill's victory with a round of 78.

Over the past three years, Dan Chiolis has developed some truly outstanding golf teams at Foothill High. The Falcons have won three consecutive East Bay Athletic League titles, and three successive North Coast Section Championships. With their most recent victory the Falcons have now succeeded in winning back-to-back C.I.F. Northern California Golf Championships. With this kind of consistency, and with the team depth which Foothill seems to produce each season, there has to be an outstanding golf coach contributing a great deal of time and effort to the program. A tip of the hat is certainly due Dan Chiolis for the successful program he has developed at Foothill High School.

Selection by league coaches

Baseball Players Selected For All E.B.A.L.

The high school baseball season has drawn to a close, and with the conclusion of play has come the selection by league coaches of the All-East Bay Athletic League baseball team. Prominent among the athletes named to the team are several players from both Amador and Foothill High schools.

Heading the list of the selectees from Amador Valley High was Chris Booth, who made First Team All-E.B.A.L. as a shortstop, and hit .437 for the season with 14 RBI's. Making the Second Team for Amador was Eric Samuli, whose pitching played a major role in the Don's successful season. Samuli, who compiled a record of 3 wins against 1 loss, had an outstanding 1.61 E.R.A. with 26 strikeouts in 34 innings of pitching.

Also making the Second Team as a utility player was Mike Malone. Malone, who played catcher, first base and designated hitter, hit .324 for the season with 8 RBI's.

Rounding out the Amador selections were Chuck Mercer and Ed Santero, both of whom made Honorable Mention. Mercer, a first baseman, hit .333 for the Dons with 7 RBI's. Santero, one of the league's finest defensive outfielders, hit .244 for the season.

Foothill High's Ron Perkins landed a First Team berth on the All-E.B.A.L. team as a first baseman. Perkins led the league in hitting for virtually the entire season before being edged out of the batting crown on the final day of the season. Perkins ended his career at Foothill with a .447 average, and as the second best hitter in the league.

Picked to the Second Team was infielder Aaron Fountain, who had a .421 batting average for the season, with 2 homeruns and 12 RBI's. Fountain also had a .593 on base percentage, and tied for the league lead in triples with 3.

Ryan Savage, Foothill's utility player and designated hitter, made Honorable Mention on the All-E.B.A.L. team on the basis of his .333 batting average for the season. Savage also had 10 RBI's for his final season at Foothill.

Joining Savage with Honorable Mention designation was Rob Basinger, whose fine defensive play in the outfield and league leading 21 runs scored highlighted his season. Basinger hit .286 on the year, with a league leading 21 runs scored and 20 walks drawn from enemy pitchers.

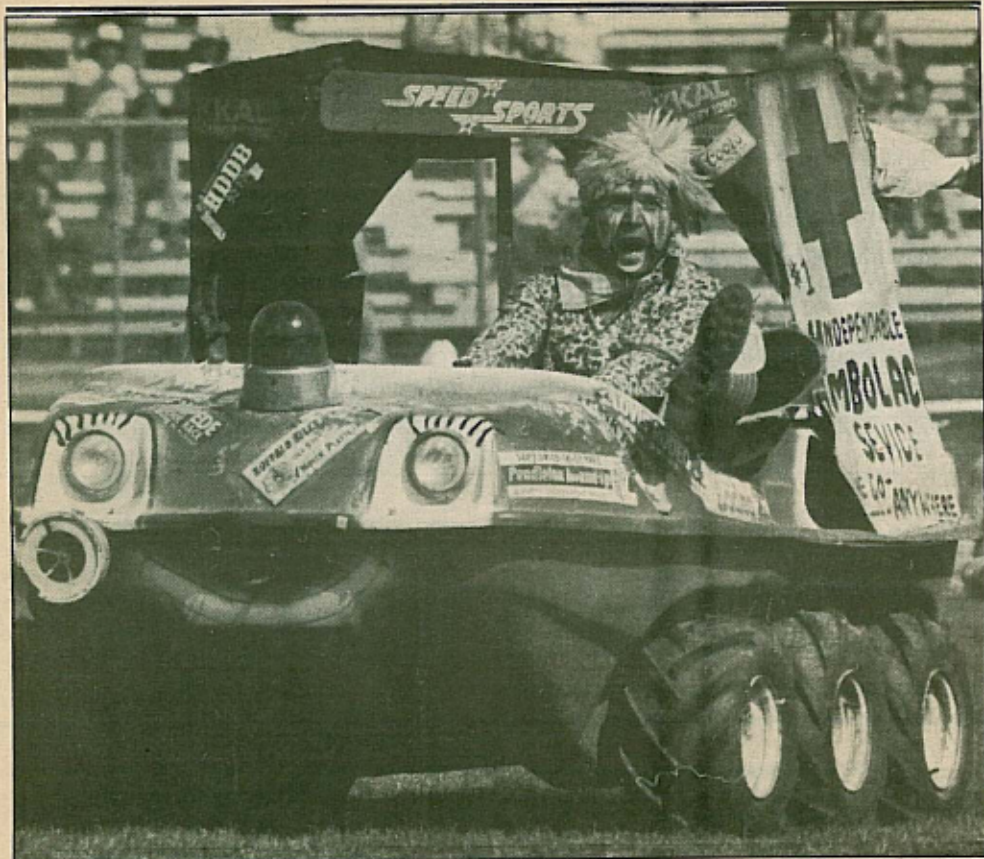

The 1986 All-South Counties baseball team, as selected by the sports writers covering high school baseball throughout the South Counties area, had Foothill's Ron Perkins awarded Honorable Mention status as an infielder. Perkins thus capped his final season of high school play by being the only local ball player selected for All-South Counties recognition.

Zedlitz Adds to Honors

Amador Valley High School's Jean Zedlitz was recently awarded yet another scholarship, in recognition of both her academic and athletic achievements.

Her latest award is the Amy Alcott Golf Scholarship, presented to the incoming freshman golfer at U.C.L.A. who best meets the requirements of outstanding academic achievement coupled with superior proficiency in the sport of golf.

The Alcott Scholarship has just been established at U.C.L.A. Alcott offers some of her time to the Bruins in a coaching capacity and was pleased by the Zedlitz selection. Alcott, a touring member of the Ladies Professional Golf Association, felt that Zedlitz represented an ideal recipient for the award, based upon her golfing success and her scholastic record while at Amador Valley High.

Los Medicos Voladores

Flying Doctors Make House Calls

by Jana Pantazelos

The Flying Doctors. Sounds like an old John Wayne movie, doesn't it? But it's better than that because it's real!

Los Medicos Voladores or The Flying Doctors, is an organization of 500 Northern California doctors, dentists and optometrists who make regular trips to small rural villages in Mexico to provide much needed medical services.

Jack Goodrich, a Pleasanton dentist has been involved with the organization for eight years and has made more than a dozen trips to the state of Sonora. He told us that requests for visits are channeled through each state's governor and teams of medical professionals fly down in six to eight small planes throughout the year.

Every month, except June and July, the "medicos" fly down. The four-day excursions run from Thursday to Sunday. The doctors fly down at their own expense ($180 per person) on Thursdays. They work in the village on Fridays and Saturdays and fly home on Sundays.

In addition to providing medical attention to villagers, the doctors teach classes, give nutritional information and bring toothbrushes and other personal hygiene materials to distribute to the people in the village. They also put on puppet shows for the children.

The villages are quite small, 500-1500 population, and usually have only the most basic clinical facility. Young Mexican medical school graduates called "practicantes" are required by the government to spend one year in public service in such needy locales as these villages. The practicantes determine the level of volunteer effort needed and coordinate the work of the "medicos."

On his most recent trip down, in May, Goodrich took his daughter Juliette with him. Juliette is a senior at Foothill High and it was her first trip to Mexico. It was also her first flight in a small plane. She was a bit apprehensive and the flight down had some bumpy spots, but once there, Juliette really pitched in and worked hard.

She assisted in the clinic handling and cleaning the instruments for her father and helping out an optometrist working with patients in the next room.

In the late afternoons and evenings, the doctors got a little "R and R." They went swimming in a nearby lake and rode in a pick-up truck to another village for a local dance. Blonde Juliette was quite an attraction at the dance.

When Saturday's work is finished, the group flies to Guayamas or Kino Bay on the coast for a bit more relaxation before the flight home on Sunday. And according to Goodrich, the Mexican food is the best you'll ever have.

Los Medicos Voladores will be taking June and July off, but Goodrich is already looking forward to his next trip in August. He invites his colleagues to call him at 569-0218 to learn more about this great organization and its efforts to share medical expertise with our neighbors to the south.

Specially hired traffic cop dances cars through Hopyard intersection.

Special Traffic Cops on Hopyard

During the construction work at the Hopyard-Dougherty road interchange, traffic congestion will be alleviated by the presence of two special traffic officers directing motorists through the interchange.

The trial program is being funded by the Prudential Insurance Co. of America at a cost of about $1900 a week.

Bob Okamura, acting director of Public Works for the City explains how the traffic officer program works: "One officer will be stationed during peak commute hours at the Owens Drive/Hopyard Road intersection in north Pleasanton; the other at Dublin Blvd. and Dougherty Rd. in south Dublin. The officers will communicate with each other by walkie-talkie to help direct the area's over-all traffic flow."

The two officers are from Richardson Security in Oakland, a firm which has provided traffic control for such clients as Golden Gate Fields and the Oakland International Airport.

"Both the city and Prudential are interested in minimizing the inconvenience that commuters and residents will face during the construction phases of the Hopyard/I-580 interchange," according to City Manager Jim Walker.

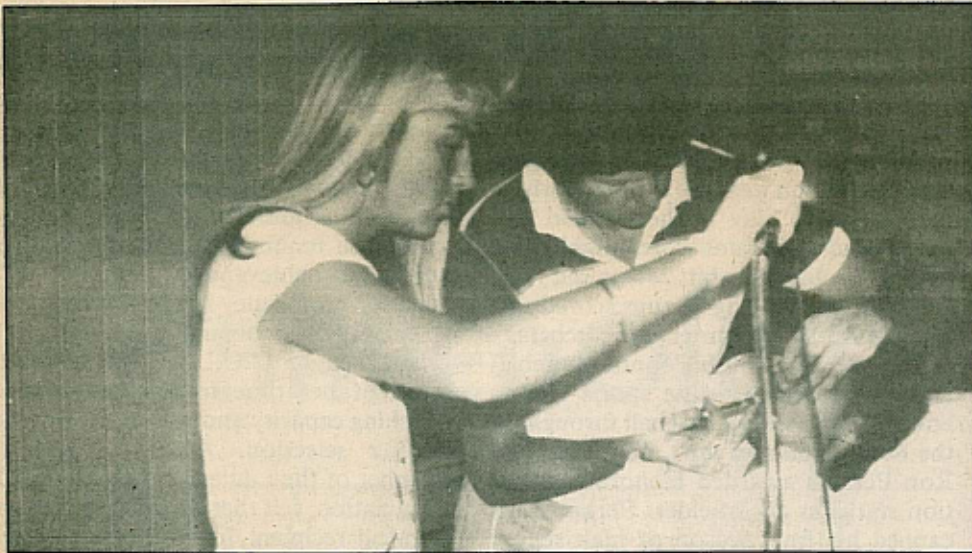

The project is scheduled for completion in September, 1987.
